officers gave pointers to city merchants Wednesday night on the best ways to get robbed, telling them of the ways to get robbee, teiling them of the ways they can help armed robbers get the loot they're after and get away... and onversely, how to take steps to avoid the same robberies and help catch the robbers.

minar was the third in a The seminar was the third in a series of presentations being made by the Police Department, beginning Dec. 10 and Police Inspector Michael Miller said it was the best attended.

Inspector Michael Miller said it was the best attended.
LL. Lynn Lowery, who assisted-tiller with Training Officer Dan Crist, said he had counted 41 merchants at the seminar Wednesday night, compared to no more than 15 at the first armed robbery seminar or the one on shopiliting.

Miller said the department had been requested for help by some of the city's merchants on handling robbery situations and the series of seminars are the result.

"This gives us a chance to hear from the merchants as well as giving us a chance to tell them how they can help us," Miller said after the meeting. Noting that some of the questions from the merchants came in the form of complaints, he said he didn't mind answering the complaints, even when they're justified, because he believes most people realize police officers are human and make mistakes too.

"Besides,". Crist. remarked, "this gives us a chance to do some PR (public relations) and shows the people of the town we care about their problems."

Miller began the meeting by showing a film produced by the state, simed at preventing commercial armed robberies and showing several situations in which the merchants actually helped the robbers by making their task easier.

helped the robbers by making their task easier.

After the film, Miller commented that more than 100,000 armed robberies were committed last year, one every 4½ minutes, that an average of $200-$300 was staken and that somebody was hurt or killed in one of four. He said robbers plan their actions and pick targets because they're easier than the merchant down the street, that they check for entrances and exits and usually enter the store with an eye on the people in it.

enter the store with an eye on the people in it.

He urged the merchants to immediately telephone the police if they see anyone acting suspicious. We'd rather respond to 10 to 15 false, complaints than respond to one armed robbery." he said. "We're here to prevent robberies." Miller said the best prevention of armed robberies by merchants is to install an alarm system and then signs up telling them the store is soequipped.

Other preventive measures, he said, include keeping counter displays and window posters low so a line of sight is available, to keep excess money locked in the store safe, to make regular bank deposits but not in a pattern potential robbers can observe and, if possible, make sure no single employee is working at night.

If a robbery occurs, Miller said, the merchants' primary responsibility should be to, "do anything it takes to stay alive. Our primary concern is to prevent the loss of life. The loss of property or money comes second... a distant second."

money comes second . . . a distant second."

During the question and answer session that followed the presentation, several store owners asked under what conditions they could legally shoot a robber.

As 'a rule of thumb, Miller advised them to shoot only to save a person's life. He said they have a constitutional right to protect a person sine. He said they have a constitutional right to protect their property but said there is always the danger of hitting an innocent bystander, that the robber will shoot first and injure or kill the merchant and even if the robber is killed, the merchant

The information coming from those meetings, he said, indicates the census is to be taken by mail this year and that although cities are being encouraged to form complete count committees in a public relations drive, there was nothing beyond that the city can City Manager Robert Sanders,

Sanders said the complete count committee, which is to be count committee, which is to be appointed by the mayor, will have the job of speaking at public meetings such as civic clubs in an effort to persuade the residents to complete their census forms and return them by April 1.

He said the committees wouldn't be allowed to give any other help such as distributing the forms door to door.

"A mail-out census." Commissioner Tom Altman said, "is probably the stupidest idea It was ever heard of." Commissioner Dorothy Walker agreed and added to Altman's suggestion that Baker write a letter in protest that Mayor Ralph Kirk appoint the committee. City Planner Joe Fay, who have been attending some of the census meetings on the coast, said a Bureau of the Census officials estimated at one of the meetings that 90 per cent of the census forms would be returned by mail.

"That got the biggest laugh of the meeting." he said what the commissioners stopped laughing, amid comments to the effect that the bureau would be lucky if 50 per cent of the forms were even delivered, much less returned.

Fay said the city would probably be required to hold a meeting with census officials because that is one of the steps should the bureau and the city disagree on preliminary estimates of the city's population. He said that would probably happen because the bureau and the city's Plant of the city's Plant of the city's Plant of 1000.

BELLE GLADE—State Representa-tive Ray Liberti told Belle Glade Rotarians Tuesday one of his more important goals in the coming legis-lative session will be to pass a bill requiring governmental agencies to budget all publications as line

Speedy decision is needed

Despite an apparently popular misconception the city is attempting to deny Belle Glade Commissioner Dorothy Walker of her rights under a stay granted her Jan. 4, the

A stupid count

been jesting Monday night when he suggested an effort be mounted to persuade all the city residents to refuse to return their census forms on April 1 but it wasn't nearly the joke made seriously by a census bureaucrat who estimated 90 per cent of the census forms would be returned.

But the decennial census itself may have become the biggest joke of all over the past 20 to 30 years.

The census forms themselves have grown from what started out in 1790 as a simple count of heads to, at least for every sixth family this year, an eight page inventory of such information as whether a family gets its water from a public source, and individual drilled well, an individual due well or other g well or other.

Where a family gets its water may be of interest to that family but it's hard to figure why the federal government should take an interest.

Granted, there may be a legitimate interest in what Granted, there may be a legitimate interest in what fuels are used in homes around the country, what with the energy problems facing the nation but whose business is it whether there's an elevator in our mobile home, when our house was built, how many bathrooms we have, whether we have air conditioning, a telephone or a complete kitchen and how many bedrooms, cars or vans we have and how much we paid last year in real estate taxes.

And we certainly don't see what business it is of the government or anyone else whether we're married or single or whether we're Guamanian, Aleut, Korean, Puerto Rican, Cuban or Black or Negro (pick one). A good number us are Heinz 57 anyway.

All those complaints are based on the fact the federal government is getting to nosy but another one is that this year, they're not even bothering to get out and make a count. They're relying on the mail.

As unreliable as past censuses have been (ask any city official), they were at least done by census workers going out, beating the streets and making eyeball contact with the people.

To think 90 per cent of the census forms will be

To think 90 per cent of the census forms will be returned, as a city official reported was estimated in a recent meeting, passes from the sidiculous to the sublime. It's unlikely anything like 90 per cent of the census forms will even be delivered and if more than 60 per cent of the people sent census forms return them, the feds can count that as gravy.

To make matters worse, local government is handed its largesses from the federal government largely in direct largesse from the federal government largely in direct proportion and based on census information. If that information is inaccurate or incomplete, local government

To aggravate matters, the census bureau is advising local governments, such as the three cities in the area, that local governments, such as the three cities in the area, that they can form complete count committees to help spread the word on the importance of completing and returning the census forms but those committees are being refused the opportunity to do anything more than public relations. Presumably, from what the Belle Glade City Commission was told Monday, the city could even offer to take the census forms door to door to be sure of an accurate count and that offer would be refused.

One thing that did come out in the meetings on the census, however, was the field workers would be sent out to see why in cases of census reports that weren't returned.

So Sanders may have had the right solution by proposing that instead of mounting a public relations campaign to persuade people to fill out and return the census forms, they ought to mount a campaign to persuade people to ignore the forms.

At least we'd get workers out to check the number of people who were mailed the forms, even if they don't perform a house-to-house check.

city commission took the proper course in seeking clarification of the stay and a speedy appeals process. Just so long as Miss Walker's actions on the commission can be considered questionable in the light of possible affirmation of Judge Williams' original ruling declaring her election to the commission nul and void, that is how long the city is facing an intolerable situation.

It's bad enough that the city may have to review every action between Oct. 1 and Dec. 18 but when the same judge, who said Miss Walker isn't a bonafide resident of the East Borough and that she was never legally elected to office, says she can continue to sit with full powers, he's office, says she can continue to sit with full powers, he's extending that intolerable situation.

From here, the obvious answer, if Judge Williams decided it was proper to hold up enforcement of his original order for a new election, would be to either stipulate that Miss Walker's actions should be considered binding whatever the final outcome of the case or he should have refused to reseat her in the interim.

One of the more bizarre possibilities became reality Monday night when Miss Walker seconded the motion to ask Judge Williams to reconsider his stay, which he could do by unseating her again, and then walking away when the roll was called for the motion.

Without some clarification, that motion, which may affect the case, could be declared illegal and void after the judge acts upon it.

The legality of four other motions made by the commission that night could also be questioned in the future since she seconded a total of four motions and made

A modification of Judge Williams' stay would seem to be in order but, failing that, a speedy appeal would be a

The special tax, which will cost the average homeowner in the county the princely sum of $12$ for each of the two years it is in effect, and two years is the maximum, will only raise $8 million to meet those needs.

That's not enough by half but a half mill is the maximum tax the state will allow the college to assess.

It's little enough, especially in light of the fact the state has, in turn, cut the allowable millage from eight to 6.7 for the county school board and is offering the public a chance to increase homestead exemption from $5,000 to $25,000 \to $25,000 \t

BELLE GLADE – Police were still investigating Tuesday night the apparent murder-suicide that claimed the lives of Roberto Castro, 37, and his wife Maria Elsa Castro, 32, of 998 N.W. 29th St. Tuesday night. Lt. Lynn Lowery said the double homicide was apparently the result of an argument and Castro apparently got a gun and shot his wife twice in the face, then turned it on himself, shooting himself in the head.

If someons asked you what are the five leading states that produce vegetables for fresh market could you name them? Most people would guess the states of California, Florida and Texas. But what nia, Florida and Texas. But what about the next two states. Here are the production figures

New York and Arizona as leading vegetable producers is a surprise to most of us.
Other interesting questions, might be what are the ten leading fresh vegetables produced in the nation? And of these top ten vegetables which one is the leading cash crop? Let's look at the production figures.

Kautz is re-named to national farm board

GAINESVILLE—Watter J. Kautz, president of Florida Farm Bureau Federation (FFBF) has been re-elected to a second two-year term on the board of directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF). AFBF is the nation's largest general farm organization with more than 3.1 million member-families.

Kautz was elected Jan. 10 at the business session of voting delegates at AFBF's 61st annual convention in Phoenix, Ariz.

Nationally, it is encouraging to see that production for most vegetables has increased from 1977 to 1979, indicating farmers are making progress in growing vegetables. They are making progress in spite of unpredictable weather and market demands. A long-time sugar cane grower from the Lake Okeechobee area, Kautz has served as FFBF presi-dent since 1969. He has been active and market demands.

Kautz has been a member of AFBF's Transportation and Pollution Committee and the Labor Study Committee. Robert B. Delano, a Warsaw, Va. grain farmer, was elected AFBF president for a two-year term Delano has been AFBF vice pres dent for the last four years as succeeds Allan Grant who he served for four years. Cecil Miller, an Arizona catti rancher, was elected AFBF vic president.

FFBF was represented at t national meeting by delegates Bi W. Hill, Jasper; James Dickinst Frostproof; Tommy Lawren DeLand; John H. Talton, Apopl Henry Bussey, Ft. White; Sh wood Johnson, Ft. Pierce; a Kautz

Farmers support Carter policy

GAINESVILLE-Prompted by President Carter's evaluation of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan as a "threat to our national security." the Florida Farm Bureau rederation (FFBF) has joined with the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) in calling for "total suspension of all non-diplomatic relations with the USSR." Support of the AFBF policy was based on a concept of national unity, even though Florida's agricultural community will not suffer severely as a result of the embargo coording to FFBF officials.

"The embargo will not have a direct or "immediate impact on Florida farmers," said Walter J. Kautz, FFBF president. But the embargo will affect all Floridians in the form of continued inflation and weakening of the dollar-and weakening of the dollar abroad."

FFBF is the state's largest general farm organization representing more than 85,500 member-families. The AFBF represents 3.1 million member-families in 49 states and Puerto Rico.

According to AFBF economist. John K. Housemann, 1980 net farm income will decline $3.1 billion and income will decline $3.1 billion and net éash receipts will drop 25 percent as a result of the embargo. Most of those farmers affected will be in Indiana, Illinois and Iowa. The value of all Florida corn and wheat grown for grain and soybeans exceeded $105 million in 1070.

The AFBF policy, adopted Jan. 9 by delegates attending the 61st annual meeting of the AFBF in Phoenix, Ariz., calls for support from all segments of the U.S. In part, the policy states: We urge the president to take the necessary steps to end all cultural and economic contacts with the USSR. These include business contracts, exchange programs, participation in the 1890 Summer Olympic Games and all other contacts other than diplomatic ties necessary to resolve the current situation. "Traditionally, the Farm Bureau has opposed the use of food as political weapon unless national security was at stake," Kautz said, "National security unity and support of fellow farmers are the foundations of the policy," Activity on the Chieago Board of Trade was encouraging on the second day of its re-opening as foreign buyers sparked a late rally.

IRS seeking VITA volunteer

Internal Revenue Service wants to help Glades wage earners get what's coming to them — money withheld from their pay for income taxes they don't owe.

According to Paula Wiggins of the West Palm Beach IRS office, there are numerous Glades resi-dents in the low-income bracket who fail to flie income tax returns and consequently deprive them-selves of refunds due them of money withheld from their wages.

Mrs. Wiggins heads the area VITA program, Volunteer Income Tax Assistance, a project spon-sored by IRS to train volunteers to help others prepare income tax

Those persons most often affected are the elderly and the non-English speaking laborers, IRS has found. Either because their income is low or they don't comprehend the filing procedures, they fall to submit income tax returns and thus forfeit the money they could get back through credits for the elderly or for child-care deductions, Mrs. Wiggins explains.

Too few general aviation pilots realize how frequently they share airspace at low altitudes with tactical fighters. . .'

By PAUL HIGBEE Major, USAF

EDITOR'S NOTE: Major Paul Hig-bee of 31 Tactical Fighter Wing/ DOAM at Homestead AFB has been involved for some time in a public information program de-signed to lower the risk of mid-air collisions between Air Force fight-ers using the Avon Park Bombing Range and general aviation pilots in this area.

Too few general aviation pilots realize how frequently they share airspace at low altitudes with tactical fighters such as the F-4 Phantom. And some pilots don't realize that these fighters may be flying a lot faster than the usual 250 knots (284 mph) airspeed limit that applies to most aircraft flying below 10.000 feet.

Low altitude, high speed tactics would be needed to penetrate enemy air defense systems. The military departments and Federal Avniation Administration have jointly established Military Traing Routes so that American fighter pilots can learn to safely fly low and Air Force fighter pilots are also extremely concerned about civilian aircraft entering their gunnery range airspace. Every office seems to have one person to whom everyone gravitates when they need an enswer, and in this office, it seems Dean bears up under many crisis.

I have reached the limit of my patience, I complained to Dean. In my house we have four dirtier-uppers and only one cleaner-upper. No matter how much I complain, nothing changes.

"That's got a simple answer," he said. "Just don't pick up after them."

That's mutiny! I thought. Give up the superwoman image and admit I couldn't handle a full-time job and a house all by my lonesome? Never! So I ignored the advice for a while. After all, what does he know? Shouldn't have ed him in the first place.

Palm Beach County Commissioner Bill Bailey and County Engineer Herb Kahlert joined hands Wednesday morning to explain the proposed county road bond issue to members of the Canal Hazards Safety Committee.

primary election but Glades residents would benefit by other projects and he backs the issue.

The county commissioner noted the only District Five projects are the reconstruction of three miles of Airport Road east of Belle Glade and the construction of fourland SR80 between 20 Mile Bend and where the relocated SR80 between 20 Mile Bend and where the relocated SR80 intersects SR700.

On the other hand, Bailey said Glades residents would also benefit by two other projects which would see the killer highway four-laned all the way from 20 Mile Bend east to Military Trail.

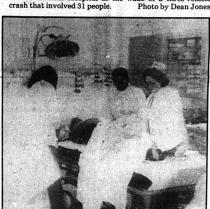

He said the county commission moved officially Tuesday to put the bond issue on the Mar. 11 ballot and, in response to a survey taken earlier this month by the county, re-adopted a development impact fee which would assess $300 for the building permits of new residences to be used to build roads.

Kahlert said the survey igdicated 42 per cent of the respondents are in favor of the bond issue and 44 per cent are opposed while 14 per cent are undecided, "and most of the people polled hadn't heard anything about the bond."

The engineer said the survey also indicated, however, that 69 per cent of the respondents would be in favor of the bond issue if the impact fee were reinstated. Bailey said that was the reason for the commissioner's action Tuesday.

Kahlert said there is a total need of $380 million worth of road construction in the county right now and the bond issue would raise an estimated $187.5 million which would

Glades garbage to go to coast?

By DEAN JONES
Herald-Observer Editor
BELLE GLADE — With only eight months of life left in the city's sanitary landfill, a decision was made Monday night that could mean garbage and trash generated in the Glades will be transported to the coast until a permanent solution to solid-waste disposal can be found.

Members of the Palm Beach County Solid Waste Authority's Glades Budget and Policy Advisory Committee (B&PAC) adopted a plan to set up an interim transfer station operation plan which is expected to be bucked to the Authority when it next meets Feb. 20

The B&PAC members were presented with a proposed contract with BW Energy Systems, Inc. to provide a facility designed to cook garbage, using a method known as pyrolosis to help pay for the disposal by selling a byproduct similar to diesel fuel.

The problem faced by the committee members, however is the short life expectancy of the city landfill and the realization it could be some time before the pyrolosis plant will go into operation.

Besides, Solid Waste Authority Director Tim Hunt said, even with the pyrolosis plant, assuming it ever goes into operation, certain solid waste will still have to be transported and the company is expected to be able to provide the transfer station and equipment in case the facility doesn't work as planned.

Hunt said he hasn't refined the figures yet but a preliminary estimate of the cost for the transfer station preliminary estimate of the cost for the transfer station and three tractor-trailers to make the runs to the cost to be just over $500,000. The capital costs and day-to-day operation, he said, will probably cost Glades residents a maximum of $13 per ton.

He said another consideration was that with the price of fossil fuels jumping as much as 88 per cent last year, the cost of incinerators, another method considered earlier, will be shortly reaching $25 a ton.

"That makes landfills more viable," he said.

Hunt proposed to the B&PAC that the transfer station could be built at the present landfill site. He said the only thing needed would be a blacktopped area atop the landfill, along with truck scales and a 14-foot retaining wall.

Garbage collection trucks would haul their loads to the paved area, dump it after it's weighed and it would then be pushed over the retaining wall into 92-foot trailers by a front-end loader.

Hunt said three tractor-trailers, one front-end loader and a service pickup truck would be needed. The transfer station and vehicles would serve Belle Glade, South Bay and the unincorporated area west of 20 Mile Bend. Pahokee may also be asked if that city wants to

Should the pyrolosis system be adopted eventually, the

Should the pyrolosis system be adopted eventually, the transfer station would be used to haul waste items such as old appliances and as a backup system.

Pyrolosis was presented as "the wave of the future" to the B&PAC last July, with company officials saying the system cooks down garbage and trash to the point the only residue is 5 per cent inert ash along with oil and gas that could be used to power hot water heaters or vehicles.

A LATTICEWORK etched against the sky was the end result Sunday when Civil Air Patrol officer Joseph Hughes bolted together the last two pieces of steel in the skeleton of a hangar at Belle Glade Airport. Hughes, Squadron Commander Kenneth Lutz and officer Doug Wooten were working on the building, which the squadron hopes will eventually house a squadron light plane. Photo by Deat Jones
